NCAA WOMEN'S GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Northwestern pulls off big upset of Stanford for title

Cameron Jourdan
Golftweek | USA TODAY NETWORK

CARLSBAD, CA — With a win in the national championship, Stanford had an argument to be considered the greatest women's college golf team ever.

The top-ranked team in the nation didn't lose in stroke play this season, matching a mark accomplished only once by Arizona State three decades ago. On May 19 at Omni La Costa Resort & Spa, site of the NCAA Women's Golf Championship, Stanford completed the best 72-hole performance in the history of the NCAA Championship, finishing at 27 under par and essentially stamping its claim as the best team in college golf.

But in match play the team that was best in stroke play more often than not doesn't win the NCAA championship.

Enter Northwestern. The Wildcats won one tournament this year, lost by 29 strokes to Stanford at NAAs and finished nine shots behind the Cardinal at the NCAA Norman Regional two weeks ago. But none of that matters in match play, and Northwestern is leaving Carlsbad with its first national title.

Northwestern claimed the championship on May 21, topping Stanford 3-2 in the match play final on a sunny afternoon north of San Diego. It's one of the biggest upsets in the history of the NCAA Women's Golf Championship, with the Wildcats preventing Stanford from winning its second consecutive title and took in four years. A relentless team that took full advantage of the reset that match play provides, and the Wildcats are headed back to campus with extra hardware.

Freshman Dianna Lee celebrates after winning her match that clinched Northwestern's NCAA Division I Women's Golf Championships title May 21 at Omni La Costa Resort & Spa in Carlsbad, California.
ORLANDO RAMIREZ/GETTY IMAGES

"It's surreal," Wildcats coach Emily Fletcher said. "Honestly, things are moving really slow right now. I don't think it's really hit any of us. It's about doing what this group thought they could do, and that's all they did. They didn't go out to try to prove anybody wrong. They just went out to just be themselves and to just compete as hard as they could. And that was going to be enough."

Freshman Dianna Lee, who went to high school about 25 miles from Omni La Costa, buried a 5-footer for par on the 18th hole to beat Andrea Revuelta and give Northwestern the distinction of arguably the biggest upset in women's college golf history.

Lee was 3 up with five holes to play but lost Nos. 14 and 15, and Revuelta had a 4-foot par putt on the par-3 16th to tie the match but missed. Then on 17, Lee had a 15-footer to win the match but powered it past the hole. She took deep breaths and reminded herself of what Northwestern's sports psychologist taught her about controlling emotions.

Drained the comebacker. Up heading to the 18th tee.

Revuelta hit her approach first into the par 5, finding the back of the green. Lee's shot came up short of the pin and somehow stayed on the green. She hit the first putt and drilled the hole, but the ball was traveling too fast and lipped out about 5 feet to her right. Then Revuelta had a chance to tie the match, but her putt didn't have enough pace and missed low. Lee once again collected herself, stepped over the putt and knocked it in. She proceeded to sprint into her teammates arms, and the celebration was on.

"I'm on such a high right now, especially the championship being at my hometown, it means absolutely everything to me," Lee said. "It's so incredibly special. It's like no other. You can't even explain what it means to win a championship in your hometown. It's like you're the main character. That's what I feel like right now."

Freshman Hsin Tai Lin got the first Northwestern point, topping Stanford freshman Mejia Ortengren 3 and 2. But the bigger victory that truly turned the tides was Leurya Nguyen, the senior from Seattle who was 2 up with three holes to play but watched as Paula Martin Sampedro won Nos. 16 and 17 to tie the match and take control on the 18th tee box. However, when Sampedro missed a birdie putt on the par 5, Nguyen buried hers from beneath the hole, and the ensuing fist pump and scream sent rumbles throughout the golf course.

Stanford wasn't done, punching back as Kelly Xu battled to win her match 1 up on the 18th green. Megha Ganne, in the first match, had a dominating 5-and-4 win over Ashley Yun, but the rest of the scores were purple for a majority of the afternoon.

Northwestern prevented Stanford from winning its second consecutive title and becoming the first team since Duke in 2006-07 to win back-to-back (Duke won in 2005, as well).

"I just know that there's going to be some learnings from this," Stanford coach Anne Walker said. "You learn the most when you lose, right? And we haven't lost very much. So a great opportunity to go through that and grow from this moment."

All five of Stanford's starters in match play will return next season. They'll have a chance to build on what they started but were unable to finish.

"We haven't had a ton of experience in match play," Fletcher said. "Maybe it worked a little bit in our favor and that they didn't really know what they were getting into. They knew what they needed to do to take care of their own business, and they did that."

COLLEGE MEN'S LACROSSE

Rematch winners will get a shot at championship

Eddie Timanus
USA TODAY

The biggest event in lacrosse continues May 24, when it's the men's turn to take the field at Gillette Stadium in Foxborough, Massachusetts, for their NCAA semifinal showdowns.

Both contests are rematches of regular-season games.

This year's festsome includes a couple of teams with huge fan bases from central New York hoping to end, by their lofty standards, lengthy title droughts. The other two are Big Ten squads, one of which is a longtime fixture in the sport while the other is hoping its third semifinal appearance will lead to its first championship.

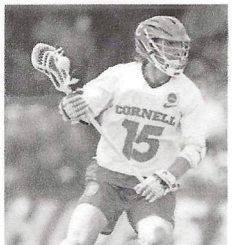

No. 1 Cornell (16-1) vs.
No. 5 Penn State (12-4)

Time/TV: Noon ET, ESPN2
How they got here: Cornell — beat Albany 15-6, Richmond 13-12, Penn State — beat Colgate 13-11, Notre Dame 14-12.

National championships: Cornell three (last 1977), Penn State none.

Players to watch: Cornell — CJ Kirst (76 goals, 32 assists); Ryan Goldstein (38 G, 50 A); Michael Long (29 G, 38 A). Penn State — Matt Traynor (42 G, 17 A); Hunter Aquino (16 G, 21 A); Ethan Long (18 G, 17 A).

Quick sticks: Since emerging as one of the sport's powerhouses in the 1970s, the Big Red are still trying to add to their three titles. They've been agonizingly close on a couple of occasions, most notably in 2009 when they led Syracuse in the final minute but fell in overtime. ... Kirst already owns numerous scoring records and will likely add the Tewaaraton to his list of honors next weekend. ... The Nittany Lions, however, are responsible for Cornell's lone loss, a 13-12 overtime thriller March 8. They're also responsible for ending Notre Dame's bid for a third consecutive title thanks to last week's improbable comeback win in the quarterfinals.

Cornell's CJ Kirst has 76 goals and 32 assists this season.
EVAN BERNSTEIN/GETTY IMAGES

No. 2 Maryland (13-3) vs.
No. 6 Syracuse (13-5)

Time/TV: 2:30 p.m. ET, ESPN2
How they got here: Maryland — beat Air Force 13-5, Georgetown 9-6, Syracuse — beat Harvard 13-12, No. 3 Princeton 19-18.

National championships: Maryland four (last 2022), Syracuse II (last 2009). Players to watch: Maryland — Eric Spanos (30 G, 16 A); Braden Erksa (30 G, 15 A); Daniel Kelly (32 G, 9 A). Syracuse — Joey Spallina (25 G, 53 A); Owen Hiltz (45 G, 27 A); Michael Leo (30 G, 12 A).

Quick sticks: The Terrapins are in their 30th NCAA semifinal, the most to control the pace of the game, which Maryland managed to do in an 11-7 victory in their encounter Feb. 15. But the Orange can win a single-digit game if needed, as they did in their 9-8 triumph against Duke in the ACC tournament.

COLLEGE WOMEN'S LACROSSE

National powers headline Final Four field in 2025

Eddie Timanus
USA TODAY

The attention of the lacrosse world turns to Foxborough, Massachusetts, this Memorial Day weekend, the traditional place on the calendar for its biggest event as NCAA championships will be determined.

The women take the field first at Gillette Stadium on May 22 with two semifinals. The docket features the top four seeded teams, and they're all quite familiar with the big stage. The field includes the three most recent champs, with the fourth team making its second straight championship weekend appearance and third overall hoping to break through for its first title.

No. 1 North Carolina (20-0) vs.
No. 4 Florida (20-2)

Time/TV: 3 p.m. ET, ESPN2
How they got here: North Carolina — beat Clemson 18-9, Princeton 19-10, Florida — beat Mercer 18-6, Stanford 13-12 (20T), Duke II-9.

National championships: UNC three (last 2022), Florida none.

Players to watch: North Carolina — Ashley Humphrey (31 goals, 82 assists); Chloe Humphrey (79 G, 27 A); Marissa White (45 G, 7 A). Florida — Gianna Monaco (73 G, 20 A); Frankie Hahn (32 G, 39 A); Jordan Russo (26 G, 26 A).

Quick sticks: The Tar Heels look to match the feat of an undefeated championship season they achieved in 2022. They beat all the other Final Four participants in the regular season, including a 14-9 win at Florida on Feb. 15. ... The Humphrey sisters garner most of the headlines, but the UNC offensive depth goes well beyond them with 10 players recording at least 30 points on the season. ... Due to conference realignment, Florida is now an affiliate member of the Big 12 in women's lacrosse, but the Gators' winning ways have not changed. This marks the program's third semifinal appearance, though they've yet to reach the championship game.

Rachel Clark of Boston College has a nation-leading 103 goals. ANDREW KATSAMPES/ISI PHOTOS VIA GETTY IMAGES

No. 2 Boston College (19-2) vs.
No. 3 Northwestern (18-2)

Time/TV: 5:30 p.m. ET, ESPN2
How they got here: Boston College — beat Stony Brook 10-7, No. 7 Yale 18-11, Northwestern — beat Michigan 15-7, Penn 17-12.

National championships: Boston College two (last 2024), Northwestern eight (last 2023).

Players to watch: Boston College — Rachel Clark (103 G, 22 A); Emma LoPinto (76 G 32 A); McKenna Davis (25 G, 75 A). Northwestern — Madison Taylor (105 G, 41 A); Niki Miles (40 G, 26 A); Riley Campbell (35 G, 17 A).

Quick sticks: These two programs squared off in the championship game each of the last two years. The Eagles took last year's meeting in a thriller, and they upended the Wildcats 13-9 earlier this season as well — coincidentally also on Feb. 15. ... Taylor and Clark have been nip and tuck all season in the national scoring race, and both are Tewaaraton Award finalists.
