Preston Summerhays could be best in Utah

Adam Schupak
Golfweek | USA TODAY NETWORK

Preston Summerhays was destined to go into the family business — the golf business.

By the time Summerhays was 3, he wielded a cut-down driver and putter, and his father would bring a loaf of bread and let him ride around with him on the cart as he practiced all day.

"Ever since I was 10, I wanted to play professional golf," he said.

Summerhays, 23, is playing this week on a sponsor exemption at the PGA Tour's Bank of Utah Championship at Black Desert Resort in Ivins as he makes his way in the pro ranks.

Golf is a way of life for the Summerhays family, who are Utah golf royalty. His father, Boyd, played 11 years as a professional, including making it all the way to the PGA Tour in 2003. Injuries sidetracked his career, but he became a swing coach and worked for several years with tour pros such as Tony Finau, Wyndham Clark and Talor Gooch.

Preston's great-grandfather, Pres, was head coach at the University of Utah and his great-grandmother, Lynn, was president of the Utah Junior Golf Association. His great uncle, Bruce, won three times on the PGA Tour Champions and was named coach of the year in the Pac-12 during a stint at Stanford. His uncle, Daniel, won on the Korn Ferry Tour as an amateur and played on and off the PGA Tour since 2011, while his cousin, Carrie, played on the LPGA tour and is the head women's golf coach at BYU, and another cousin, Joe, won the Utah Section PGA Professional Championship and a host of state tournaments and played in a couple of PGA Championships.

Preston is carrying on the family legacy in the Beehive State. Raised in Farmington, he twice won the Utah

Amateur, including at age 15 to become the youngest champion in tournament history. He also won the U.S. Junior Amateur in 2019, was named a first-team All-American at Arizona State University and represented the United States at the Junior Presidents Cup, Arnold Palmer Cup and Walker Cup. He finished seventh in the PGA Tour University ranking, which earned him status on the Korn Ferry Tour when he turned pro in June and extends through the 2026 season.

"It's been a great learning opportunity for me to get those starts and have somewhere to play and just learn more about myself and more about the game week to week," he said.

Five months into making his dream a reality, Summerhays was asked what he's learned so far.

"I learned that I love it a lot more than I thought," he answered. "I love every single aspect of it. I love the travel. I love the prep for tournaments. I love the practice rounds. I love hanging out with my buddies on the road."

The biggest surprise so far from being in the play-for-pay ranks?

"How much free time I have. It's so great. I mean, I don't have homework. I don't have, you know, mandatory workouts. It's nice," he said. "I'm able to set my own schedule, practice when I want, able to recover how I want."

"You know, yeah, just really be able to take charge of my own career."

Summerhays made 11 starts on the Korn Ferry Tour this summer, registering two tied for seventh finishes, including at the Utah Championship. His caddies have included former teammates, sister Grace, younger brother Cam and his dad, who will be on the bag this week.

"If there's any week to play well," Preston said, "it's the week of a sponsor's exemption on the PGA Tour."

NBA places Billups, Rozier on immediate leave

Chris Bumbaca
USA TODAY

The NBA has placed Portland Trail Blazers head coach Chauncey Billups and Miami Heat guard Terry Rozier on "immediate leave" after they were indicted in a wide-ranging illegal gambling scheme that includes ties to organized crime and involves more than 30 individuals.

"We are in the process of reviewing the federal indictments announced today," the NBA said in a statement on Thursday Oct. 23, about two hours after the FBI and Eastern District of New York announced details of the investigation at a news conference.

The league said it will "continue to cooperate with the relevant authorities."

"We take these allegations with the utmost seriousness, and the integrity of our game remains our top priority," the statement said.

Billups was charged in connection with an illegal poker operation tied to the Mafia.

Rozier is accused of manipulating his performance during an NBA game to benefit illegal betting.

Rozier previously played for the Boston Celtics and Charlotte Hornets. He was the 16th overall pick in the 2015 draft.

Billups won the 2004 NBA title as a member of the Detroit Pistons and played 17 years in the league. He became Portland's head coach in 2021 and was inducted into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in 2024.

The National Basketball Players Association, the players' union, also released a statement.

"The integrity of the game is paramount to NBA players, but so is the presumption of innocence, and both are hindered when player popularity is misused to gain attention," the NBA said. "We will ensure our members are protected and afforded their due process rights through this process."

Rozier attorney issues statement

The lawyer for Rozier says his client will fight allegations that he was involved in a wide-ranging gambling ring that has resulted in more than 30 arrests.

In a statement to USA TODAY, attorney Jim Trusty says investigators previously told Rozier he was "a subject, not a target" of the gambling probe.

However, following Rozier's arrest on Thursday Oct. 23, Trusty says FBI officials "appear to be taking the word of spectacularly in-credible sources rather than relying on actual evidence of wrongdoing."

Trusty noted that the NBA conducted its own preliminary investigation last year after the allegations first surfaced. "Terry was cleared by the NBA and these prosecutors revived that non-case," he said.

Trusty took particular issue with the way Rozier was taken into custody Thursday morning at the Heat's team hotel in Orlando, Florida.

"It is unfortunate that instead of allowing him to self-surrender they opted for a photo op. They wanted the misplaced glory of embarrassing a professional athlete with a perp walk. That tells you a lot about the motivations in this case."

At the center of attention in Rozier's case is a March 23, 2023, game between the Charlotte Hornets and New Orleans Pelicans. Sports books in several states flagged unusual betting activity on Rozier's statistics, triggering a halt on his prop bets. Rozier, who averaged 35.3 minutes and 21.1 points per game that season, left the game after playing just 10 minutes due to a foot injury.

Justice Department officials alleged on Thursday that more than $200,000 was bet on Rozier's "under" in the game. "Terry is not a gambler, but he is not afraid of a fight, and he looks forward to winning this fight," his attorney said.
